ELVIRA LEVERONI IN THE GROUNDS OF DESERTION

ASTORZ SOCIETY DEGREE

Madame Elvira Leveroni, Boston's new songbird, operatic star and prima donna, is now legally free to devote herself wholeheartedly to her first love, music.

It took Judge Fessenden of the Worcester Superior Court but five minutes to grant a divorce on the grounds of desertion to her wealthy Worcester husband, Dr. Leon Astor, 68, dental specialist, businessman and Harvard graduate.

The former "little songbird of the North Knoll," sister of Judge Leveroni's city, and daughter of a wealthy Italian importer, still not cost the divorce suit. But from other sources it is learned that the prima donna, who for the past two years has been with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, is pleased with the news.

WHEN NO ONE CHALLENGED, she once her marriage, the debutante opera singer at the Metropolitan Opera house, New York, on January 4, 1917. Madame, in her own mind, she also has been turned the exactitudes of marriage.

The again friends say they "just don't get along." She was following the matrimonial vows she had pledged in her wedding ceremony, but she refused to return to the family hearthstone where six months before she was living.

He declared the prima donna immediately left on an extended tour through the South and West, and that she was the writing of "desertion" to a romance that had its inception while he was a member of the faculty of the Harvard Medical School, and she was singing in Boston.

"THE PERFECT LOVE," the advent of Spring and Summer saw the couple transferred to Palm Beach, where the moonlight nights, the song of the lapping waves, and a few divines, culminated in their engagement and marriage. It was this time that the prima donna, who was then a member of the faculty of the Harvard Medical School, and she was singing in Boston.

What a perfect love!

Mrs. Leveroni is a native of Boston, and was born of Giuseppe Leveroni, who came to make his home in Boston. The Madame has on various occasions, lived in Brookline and in the city. She has been married to Dr. Leon Astor, who was a member of the faculty of the Harvard Medical School, and she was singing in Boston.

BRILLIANT CAREER. This, her first appearance, before Italy's King and Queen at a "commander's" party, firmly launched her on a brilliant career. She has since then, she has been a public receptionist at admirals on her return and presented a second-division, incident. This took place at City Hall.

Her first big Boston appearance was with the original Boston Grand Opera Company. She was crowned achievement at that time in the role of "Madame Butterfly."

Until she was married she was almost exclusively on the stage and made many trans-Atlantic trips.

"THE CRIMINAL ALIBI" If you suffer from insomnia, ask the first half of this greatest of American mystery stories, which will be given away free with the Boston Sunday Express. More than 60,000 copies, in book stores, not less than one dollar.

Back Bay Youth Held for Man-slaughter Following Crash on Harvard Bridge

John Bishop, eighteen years old, was indicted yesterday for the manslaughter of a young woman, who was seriously injured when she was struck while crossing the Harvard bridge early today by an automobile owned by Sidney Hosmer, construction superintendent living at 30 1/2 Bay State road, and operated by his son, Sidney S. Hosmer.

The Bishop lived at No. 15 Brook Avenue, Dorchester.

The two brothers were driving slowly, with John in the driver's seat and Bernard in the side-car, when Hosmer's machine struck them and hurled the car against the wooden pilings at the edge of the bridge.

The Bishop was thrown from his seat and sent hurtling through the air for thirty feet, while Bernard was held in the narrow aisle, unable to extricate himself.

Patrolmen Cushman and Dwyer of the Central square station, Cambridge, responded to a call sent in by a pedestrian. Both of the Bishop boys were taken to the Children's Hospital, where John was pronounced dead. Bernard has serious internal injuries, will probably recover.

Hosmer was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. Last night he was released on $1,000 bonds. He was arraigned in police court later in the day.

Police are meanwhile endeavoring to find eyewitnesses to the accident. Although a telephone call was sent to the station, no one who saw the crash came from Harvard Bridge and Hosmer could be found.

Milford, Oct. 21.—Two Milford autos wrecked, and turned turtle on down grades as the result of leaves on the State road and in both instances the tops of the machines were smashed and the cars wrecked, while the passengers only got cuts and scratches.

Nathan Holloway and William Marston, while returning from Worcester, were pinned under a Ford which overturned, and Marston killed in such a manner as to have the gasoline drip into his left ear, which is causing him a funny sensation yet.

This happened on the Upton road when he put his brakes on too soon while skidding on the leaves. The other accident, with the leaves was on the shore road. The machine was that of Philip Phillips of Hopedale.

Mrs. Phillips was driving Mr. and Mrs. George Parker to a Boston hospital, where Mr. Parker is being treated for an old injury to his leg and hip.

Artist Finds Strength Is Predominant Character of 'School Candidate'

I felt my way through clouds of smoke into a large room, empty save for the figure of a man from whom proceeded the smoke clouds. It was Charles S. O'Connor, and when the smoke cleared away, a little I began to take stock of the "School Candidate for Mayor."

600,000 ARE ON THE ROAD TO INSANITY

Many Now in Schools Can Be Cured by Preventive Work, Williams Tells Doctors

Now the seeds of insanity and mental degeneracy are sown in childhood and youth with interestingly told at the annual meeting of the Copley-Plaza Hotel of the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene by Dr. Frankwood E. Williams, one of the directors of the National Society for Mental Hygiene. More than 200 prominent doctors, educators and social workers were present.

At least 600,000 individuals, according to Dr. Williams, will be admitted to state hospitals for the insane within the next ten years. There will be many others suffering from less serious forms of mental disease.

A considerable number of these are now in the public schools and preventive work in mental hygiene may save them from a life of insanity or criminality.

"From what slight causes spring the mental diseases that wreck the lives of so many is illustrated in the story of a West Point cadet whom I was called to treat," said Dr. Williams.

"He had been one of the best-liked and most promising men at the academy, yet when I saw him his life was blighted and he was contemplating suicide. He only troubles with that he was afraid that he would be unable to sleep."

"He did sleep at least eight hours a day, and yet the fear that he would not be able to succeed in his every waking moment, and without rest, he would have become a maniac. Taken in time, his cure was comparatively simple, and he is now perfectly normal."

EARLY SIGNS OF DISORDER. Dr. C. Macle, president of the society, and superintendent of the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, mentioned the early signs of mental disorder that may be recognized in the young boy or girl.

"Many individuals," he said, "show as puberty or adolescence or in early adult life, during their college career, indications of poor mental health. Among these are such reactions as exclusiveness, day-dreaming, a feeling of inferiority."

The character of the adult has its foundation laid in these preparatory years, and what is done then may determine the later balance of the individual.

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University emphasized the remarks of Dr. Austin Putnam, of Brookline, on the necessity for free clinics for nervous and mental diseases.

RESERVE OFFICERS ARE GIVEN ASSIGNMENTS. The following assignments of reserve officers to the organizations of the 14th Division, Organized Reserve, are announced at the First Corps Area.

WHY NOT? Every day in the week the Boston Daily Advertiser pays some reader fifty dollars for writing one Last Line. It must be a clever line. You can write a clever line.

Filene's—Some things are cheap—THERE is a sharp difference between cheap things and those which are merely inexpensive.

For oftentimes the "cheap" article is the most expensive you can buy. Wiser folk have found it very profitable to go for their clothes to a store the bulk of whose business is done in higher priced lines. Just see for yourself. When this shop was opened those who design and sell the coats had already been trained in making and selling higher priced lines. To it they carried all the traditions and standards of fine making, fine touches, quality of materials and trimmings, and all their training in FASHION! The result has been a wonderful success. For folks have been quick to find that here Fashion is combined with Value. That by paying the same price they can get a better garment. And if you have not ascertained that it pays to buy Inexpensive Clothes in a store like Filene's, you have missed a great opportunity.

Proving that Filene Fashion and Filene Value go hand in hand

LAWMAKERS FAVOR SALES TAX TRIP

PLAN PROPOSED BY MR. HEARST MEETS WITH APPROVAL

By Universal Service.
Washington, Oct. 21.—The invitation tendered to such members of Congress to go to Canada by special train or train as guests of the Hearst newspapers, for the purpose of studying at first-hand the operation of the sales tax, has met with an extremely cordial response from senators and representatives.

A Full Quart of Finest Bluing

LACE INDIGO BLUE

Mary had a little dress which was as white as snow, as were the rest her mother washed—she used LACE INDIGO!

VICTIMS RESCUED

loney, Massachusetts, Phil D. Swing, California; John D. Clark, New York; Horace M. Fowler, Iowa; and Ralph Gilbert, Kentucky.

Mr. Denison writes:

"I will be glad to accept the invitation to go on the special train and make a study of the work of the sales tax in Canada. So far as I can tell at present, the time is as good as arranged."

From Mr. Maloney came this acceptance:

"Would be pleased to make the trip if you can get a crowd of Representatives to consent to visit Canada."

WOULD ENJOY TRIP.

Mr. Swing sent this answer:

"If some date could be arranged when the legislative work of the session would not be interfered with I would enjoy taking this trip, and I assure you I would take it open-mindedly. It seems to me that about the only date that could be fixed would be between the sessions of Congress, which would be about the last week in November."

The response of Mr. Clark was as follows:

"I will gladly accept this invitation if you can get a crowd of Congressmen to go along. I am free to admit that I am inclined to favor the sales tax and Senator Dumas's plan in general, after consulting with some of my senatorial and congressional friends. While I disagree with many of the policies of the Hearst papers, at the same time I am sincerely interested in having all the facts I can regarding all matters of taxation, whatever the reasons of Mr. Clark's were."

Mr. Gilbert writes:

"I would be impossible for me to go to Canada until the week beginning November 14. If this time is suitable to you I will be pleased to make the trip."

The correspondence shows an overwhelming interest in the enactment of a sales tax bill. The Senators and Representatives who responded to the invitation indicated their interest in the operation of the sales tax plan, and commended the Hearst newspapers for offering to make such a study possible.

Even those who expressed themselves as being unable to make the trip stated in their responses that they are in sympathy with the sales tax, and several announced that they would be glad to visit the United States.

The understanding which is general in both Houses of Congress that the tax bill now being considered by the Senate is merely a temporary expedient and a measure which is certain to be revised within a few months after the enactment has stimulated interest in the sales tax proposal. This is indicated by letters from Senators and representatives to the effect that the best time to make such a trip, as proposed by the Hearst papers, would be in the interim between the adjournment of the present session some time in the latter part of this month and the convening of the regular session on the first Monday in December.

EXPECT BIG SUPPORT.

The thought is conveyed in many of the letters that if the interim is devoted to a serious study of the sales tax the chances are extremely likely that such a measure will receive very large support when the new tax measure is brought before Congress.

More than a score of the letters received in the first flood of responses to the invitation are in sympathy with the sales tax. One of the strongest letters received from Representative Frederick W. Dallinger of Massachusetts, who writes: "I have never in my life been so thoroughly familiar with the situation in Canada and hearthily agree with Mr. Hearst that the experience in that country demonstrates the wisdom of a general sales tax as a means of raising revenue. From the beginning I have publicly advocated, in season and out of season, the advisability of such a tax for this country, and sincerely wish that a majority of my colleagues in the House of Representatives could be brought to the same opinion."

"GREAT PUBLIC SERVICE."

"In my opinion, Mr. Hearst, through his newspapers, has rendered a great public service in arousing public opinion upon this important phase of taxation."

Among other letters received was one from Senator Elmer W. Johnson of California, who warmly commended the plan in the following language:

"I regret exceedingly that my duties here render it impossible for me to accept the invitation. Taxation is the most vexatious and difficult problem before Congress. Whatever may add to the knowledge of members, and whatever may contribute to the solution of this problem will be, of course, most valuable and important. I congratulate the Hearst newspapers upon the enterprise and good spirit of their endeavor to aid in formulating a just and equitable plan of taxation."

Major Omar W. Underwood, military leader in the Senate, commended the plan, but explained that his appointment on the disarmament conference would make it impossible for him to go on the trip.

Representative Samuel E. Winlow of Massachusetts writes:

"I have for a long time made known my approval of some kind of a sales tax of low rate here, in preference to the present or any suggested tax plan."

MAN IS SENTENCED

ON PLEA OF WIFE

Worcester, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Oliver Dumas of No. 9 Francis street told Judge Samuel Uley in District Court that she had but one request to make—that her husband not be allowed to return home. Judge Uley granted the request by sentencing Dumas to the State Farm on a charge of drunkenness. Mrs. Dumas said her husband had not supported her for 18 years and had taken money from her at various times and was frequently drunk.

PEPTO-MANGAN KEEPS BLOOD PURE

Growing Children Need
Plenty of Red Cells
in Blood

When the young body is growing, children frequently experience weakness. Girls and boys sometimes play too hard and overtax their systems. They become pale, weak and sickly. They lose their appetites, become languid, and are not able to make progress in school work. "Growing too fast" is often true. It is most important to keep the blood of growing girls and boys in a healthy state.

Pepto-Mangan keeps the blood pure. The red cells in the blood are increased. They carry life-giving oxygen to all parts of the body, and whose some youthfulness blooms again in clear complexion, bright eyes and buoyant spirits. Hold both in liquid and tablet form by druggists everywhere. The name "Pepto-Mangan" is on the package—Advertisement.

DANGER! As many persons have been killed by auto collisions in Paris that "red hand" have been used for the protection of pedestrians. These hands are much like the white painted crossing walls on our own streets. Autoists are required to slow down at these "red hands" while pedestrians are crossing.

JE VOUS AMI! Any girl would be justified in thus addressing this cute little French look of every woman, elegantly trimmed with white silk rope braid. Her flowing lines and its offset by smart white satin collar. (U. & U.)

GWAN AWAY, SHIMMY! Thoughtful N. Y. parents are careful that their progeny doesn't learn the new steps, and thus classic dances are the rage among the youngsters. Here is a group of ladies in graceful poses—all pupils in the Chaud School.

THIS POOR JAVELIN didn't have chance when Miss Britz grasped it in her plump, but athletic, hands. She defeated her sister athletes at the Paris sport meet for women, held in the Elizabeth Stadium. The young women competed in nearly every kind of field sport. Records were lowered by the Paris ladies.

CHRISTABEL WHO CEASED TO GRUNT

WHO SAID MONKEY GLANDS? By operation of his newly discovered monkey eye that are produced by electricity, Dr. Richard Schlessner of Paterson, N. J., is alleged to have successfully restored youth to two 60-year-old men by means of direct stimulation of the pituitary gland, created within and at the base of the brain. Photo shows Dr. Schlessner and his electrical ray device. The ray can be directed on any organ within the body without the intervening tissues being affected.

GET THE RIDING HABIT IN A SEA SUIT HARK! Here's another southern California home that believes in comfort on the farm, and each morning finds them all logged out in their bathing suits, ready for the day's work or a frolic. Even mother is quite enthusiastic over the sea garb as a costume for the country and no doubt is less kind after her day's work.

A BIT UPFISH! But how does he get down? Fred Bradford, Boston's master motorcyclist, is pictured riding a device 20 feet in the air on a small table. Want his job? (Int.)

Help, Police! WHAT DO YOU MAKE OF THIS, WATSON? A private police agency, operating in an exclusive and wealthy residential district of Los Angeles, has some of the phibian pulling of hanks as a means of apprehending prowlers and criminals. Instead, there is a high tower and searchlight from which burglars are spotted and followed if they try to get away. While the spotlight search beams the criminals, another searchlight beams search mostly off in an automobile and brings him or them back. If the thief tries to escape, the tower offers an ideal point from which to shoot. (Int.)

HARDING FAVORS NEW MERCHANT MARINE POLICY

Indicates He Will Announce
"Vigorous" Program in Near Future

By Universal Service.
Washington, Oct. 21.—President Harding is in favor of a new and vigorous policy for development of the American merchant marine.

The President so informed a delegation headed by Senator Hamer, president of the National Merchant Marine Association, and Malcolm Stewart, chairman of the Senate Merchant Marine Committee, at the White House.

The delegation urged that a strict enforcement of the Jones Marine Act is necessary to the development of the American shipping industry. The President indicated that he expects to be able to announce the "new and vigorous" policy to which he referred in the near future.

Presenting their case to the President, Stewart said:

"The merchant marine is potentially the greatest asset the nation has for extending its foreign commerce. However, if the present policy of wholesale laying up of ships and the need of a comprehensive, suitable policy for future action continue, we have the sinking of the ship in a danger of becoming what Chairman Lister has called it 'the most colossal commercial wreck in the history of the world'."

The delegation will call on Chairman Lister of the Shipping Board today.

MOTHER SEEKS AID IN SEARCH FOR SON

Arlington Woman Is Frantic
Over Safety of Missing Boy
Gone Several Weeks

Has anyone any information as to the whereabouts of Walter Grant who ran away from his home at No. 32 Dudley street, Arlington, weeks ago bound for a life among the cowboys and Indians of the great West?

This mother, Mrs. Grant, is frantic with anxiety about her missing boy, when she adopted when he was but four years old, after the death of his own mother and the breaking up of his home.

It is brother, William Henry Arnold of No. 52 Sergeant street, Somerville, and employed by the Snowhagen Creamery as a chauffeur, is aiding his younger brother's foster mother in the search.

Walter is only sixteen but well known for his age, and clever. He is a graduate of the Arlington High School and assistant director of a professional orchestra as well as a support the violinist himself.

He was last heard from in New Haven, where he was taken into custody as a runaway child and allowed to go before the telegram which his father had sent to the police of his whereabouts.

Mrs. Grant saw that Walter has always been a good boy and that this is the first time he ever gave her any trouble. She is desperate. He has been described as being about 5 feet 7 inches tall with blue eyes, brown hair and a good nose. He is a very clever and can talk in the best of his mouth.

O'Neill's Columbia team Seals, George Moore, veteran end, returned after a week's absence. Moore was called home before the Tennesseans game last week, and his return was just a turn, as it would be for Seals, over the next week. Moore, caused by the loss at end of Cy Gordon, who will be out of the game for at least two weeks. Clarke had been out of the game for a week, but he is back.

was rather light and has practically no experience.

The whole squad was put through a long signal drill. Even the way the first team ran through signals displaced the coaches, although the rain had to have been responsible to some degree for the poor showing.

One other change was made in the first team line-up, although this will be a temporary one.

The injury will not keep him out of the game, but he cannot be expected to rip the Detroit line as he did the Baylon.

Mathews, who replaces Darling, seems to have recovered from the effects of the trip to the city and is the rest of the backfield. Mathews will have the job of tearing the line down, as Darling proved himself a master.

President

This was the replacing of Burke by Johnny Allen.

The rest of the team has taken definite shape now. George Moore and Eddie Lynch are sure to start on the ends, although Threshie and Streng will probably play the second half. Hubert and Neidlmeier have to get off some long punts in the practice, and spent much time in trying drop kicks from difficult angles.

The game with Detroit has created much interest, and a large sale of tickets is reported.

When Are We Going to Take and Operate Railroads?

Glenn E. Plumb of Washington, D. C., a student of our railroad problems, make a public statement concerning the value of the capital stock of seventy-one railroad corporations which he has investigated. He takes the 150 railroad corporations whose value has just been determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission. From these 150 roads, he subtracts all roads whose value is less than a million dollars. This leaves seventy-one railroads whose value exceeds a million dollars.

Of these railroads, he says:

"I find that these seventy-one corporations have issued capital stock of a par value of $544,580,000, bonds of a par value of $644,377,000, and have incurred other indebtedness amounting to $131,089,000, making a total liability on stocks, bonds and other forms of indebtedness, $1,320,000,000.

The final value of all of these properties as fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission is $877,000,000.

Mr. Plumb advises that the value of these roads, determined by the commission is $108,000,000 less than their indebtedness. This, therefore, leaves no value in their capital stock.

Concerning the roads which Mr. Plumb takes for consideration, he says:

"The railroads taken for this test are not hand picked. They are the nine run of the lot. They came from every part of the country—from Maine to California, from Florida to the State of Washington. These in the New England States are the most conservatively capitalized. But in all of the rest of the country, the practices followed in the case of the Rock Island, seem to obtain, and properties have been capitalized for 40 per cent. in excess of the actual values upon which the securities must rest.

Now even if the condition of our railroads is not as bad as Mr. Plumb thinks it is, they must be in a wretched condition to permit a man like Mr. Plumb to come anywhere near such figures.

What are the American people proposing to do about such a situation that concerns the most vital instrument of our old social organization? We may make further presents of hundreds of millions of dollars to put value into these railroad properties and leave them to their old private management, but it will only be a few years until they will be back again for more public money, the same conditions prevailing again.

You can't make a batch of multi-millionaires from Maine to California, every ten or twenty years, and also a lot of near-millionaires, fattening on the leanings of the big exploiters, without bleeding the railroads white.

How long before the people of the United States will follow the example of other countries and stop this insane quarrelling between private managers and their operators, and stop the exploitation of the railroads for private profit—an exploitation which destroys the service the railroads are capable of rendering and necessitates enormous freight rates which kill business? When are we going to take the railroads and operate them?

John R. Murphy's Success in Life Has Not Alienated Him From His Old Home and Associates

We have received a letter from a man from Charlestown, asking us to call public attention to the fact that Hon. John R. Murphy, who was born and brought up in Charlestown, still lives there.

Our correspondent believes that when ordinary people weigh the qualifications of the candidates, if they know this fact, they will hold it in Mr. Murphy's favor.

The Boston American is very glad indeed to call public attention to the fact that Mr. Murphy still lives in the place of his birth and up-bringing; that his subsequent success and prosperity has not alienated him from his old home and from the kind of people who live there; that he has sought no change of residence away from his old associations to new and strange neighborhoods and new and strange associations; that he does not come to his old neighborhood only when he is seeking votes; that he does not come to his old friends only when he is asking something; that his old neighbors see him every day in the year, whether a campaign is going on or whether there are no thoughts of a campaign; that he has not outgrown or risen above his old neighbors.

All these things are true, and if they will help Mr. Murphy to the favorable consideration of his fellow citizens throughout Boston, the Boston American is glad to proclaim them. Whether they show him to be especially qualified for Mayor or not, they certainly show that he is a man of democratic manners, democratic method of living, democratic associations as well as democratic professions, that he lives democratically all the year round, and does not confine himself merely to talking democratically during a campaign in which he is seeking his neighbors' votes.

Boston's Per Capita Expense

Highest in the United States, 'ut the Figures Are Insignificant, as Net Returns Are Also High

Mayor Peters need not be disturbed by the publication of figures showing that the per capita expense of the city of Boston is greater than that of any other city in the United States.

Intelligent people will be no misunderstanding the significance of such figures. They are, as Mr. Peters says, entirely insignificant. They have no bearing whatever upon the question of the economy or extravagance of our city government, because the basis of the figures in the different cities is different.

What we are interested to note is not what the gross expenditures of a business are, but what the net returns are. The well-informed throughout the nation know that the net returns of the cost of government in Boston are high. They would be higher if we had more courage and vision in the abolition of our crooked streets. Some day the intolerable conditions of the streets on account of increased automobile traffic will cause to rise a man, or a group of men, who will have the courage to do the obvious thing to correct the congestion in the very heart of the city. It is so easy to do it, if somebody had the courage.

IMPORTANCE OF STYLE IN WRITING

Many Scientists, as Well as Other Learned Men, Seem Unable to Put Down Their Facts in Simple, Plain Language

By Garrett P. Servis

After reading one of the most thoughtful and informing books that I have yet seen touching on the Einstein theories—"Louis Rougier's 'Philosophy and the New Physics,' translated from the French by Morton Matius, and happening to compare it with another book, I have had thrust before me the enormous importance of style in all writing, whether the subject be science, philosophy, history, politics, or pure literature.

Reader Disgusted Quickly

Here are two books, whose writers may be of equal intellectual power, but while one has presented his profound and difficult subject in a manner that holds the interest of the reader and makes him feel at each instant, even if he does not fully understand all the things that are placed before him, that he has a satisfactory general grasp upon the ideas presented; the other, through neglect or ignorance of the simplest principles of composition, has produced only a pool of muddy water, in whose obscuring depths much of the meaning is concealed or rendered so difficult to discover that the reader impatiently throws the book aside.

There is a continually swelling amount of scientific literature of this obscure and obscuring character. It piles up on the shelves and counters of the publishers and booksellers. The subjects are often of great public and popular interest, but the condescending reader is quickly disillusioned and disgusted when he finds that the writer has handled the English language with almost contemptuous ignorance.

The remedy is not to imitate the style of Thomas Carlyle, or Henry James or H. G. Wells, when the object is to treat say, of gas engines, but what the writer should do is to study the principles of composition so clearly and admirably set down by Herbert Spencer in his "Philosophy of Style," and then apply them to the exposition of the subject in hand.

The underlying idea of Spencer's little treatise on style is that the writer should always seek to economize the reader's attention by making his statements crystal clear, by arranging his sentences in the most natural logical order, and by choosing his words and setting them in their sentences with the utmost care, so that the right meaning and no other shall be presented to the reader's mind, and that this shall flow so smoothly and easily that the whole attention may be concentrated without any distraction upon the straightforward development of the subject matter.

This, of course, is a counsel of perfection. Nobody can avoid an occasional obscurity of statement, and Spencer himself furnishes many examples if they are specially sought for. The precise form adopted also depends upon the particular subject and the particular object that the writer may have in view. But in any case, especially when dealing with science, perspicuity is essential.

If in addition to the inherent difficulty of the statement that you have to make, you introduce an unnecessary difficulty of understanding just what you mean to say, you are likely to tire the reader's attention and to blunt the sensibility of his mind.

This matter of clearness of statement and correct use of language is so important that it ought to be made the subject of particular instruction in schools. And it is worth everybody's while to study it all his life long and every day of his life.

If people would devote to this subject one-half of the attention that they pay to acquiring and using the latest slang words and expressions, everybody would soon be able to speak and write with some, at least, distant approach to the mastery of clearness of Abraham Lincoln's utterances and writings.

There is an anecdote of Lincoln that is worth endless repetition. When asked how he acquired his

O, FOR LODGE IN SOME NEARBY PRISON!

HAPPY the man that needs not quarrel with the telephone, as his favorite indoor sport, nor envy the contempts whose equipment, out of doors, might enable him to escape the murderous rush of traffic.

Not for enough leisure to think some thoughts that are dear to you, and to do a few of the things that you really want to do—instead of being everlastingly and fruitfully driven by the mad whirl of modern life.

The horror of thinking yourself perfectly well and fairly free, and yet—caught helplessly in the fetid stir, unprofitable, and fever of the world!

Almost, like Duncan, you'd rather be in your grave, wouldn't you?

Or like Robert Holland, you are willing to be clasped into the living grave of the jail; if only over your tomb there could be written the classic words: "After life's fitful fever he sleeps well." Duncan you know. He was one of Mitchell's bloody victims, only a playfellow. But Robert Holland is a regular fellow, a man of our day—not so unlike the real thing, but whose example is heretofore as more curious than commendable.

Pictureque News

Lately a dispatch from New Orleans brought us the picturesque news that Robert Holland, sentenced to serve eight to twelve years for the robbery of the Fibberia Bank, said that he was glad to be sent to the penitentiary!

He asserted that this would give him the chance to fulfill his life's ambition and become a writer!

His plan is to read and study for the first four or five years; and then he is going to try to write. He adds: "I've always had a hankering to write. Just watch my smoke when I get started."

It will be interesting to watch the career of Robert Holland, and, later, to see the product of his pen. Now, here are friendly greetings from us fuddled folks outside to his free spirit behind the bars.

Not that we wish, in the slightest sense, to put the premium of approval upon the stupid spirit of a man who has the courage of his viciousness to defy society in the commission of crime.

We are not among those who will hurry to bring flowers to a murderer's cell, while we neglect the burial place of his victim.

But his story appeals to us, primarily, in Robert Holland is the fact that he refuses to be defeated by the prison. That would be a severe penalty to pay, far worse than that which afflicts by the world.

He enters the prison, penitent—we have heard him brag high, not in defiance, but in self-respect. He cannot choose but choose to live, since he has dedicated his term to preparation for an honorable escape.

At once, he takes up his cross and begins protesting it. He works the better way, converts the cross into a crown.

Herein, from prison, Holland preaches to us as presumably free people on the outside. Many of us, doubtless, have our cross to bear; and we pine and wail, or pant and sweat under its weight. Instead of being uplifted thereby?

Not only is each of us, by weakness, his own jailer; but, by sincere aspiration and by consequent strength of spirit, each can be his own savior.

Discover Themselves

To return to our Southern prisoner, if—as is most likely—he persists in his determination to do nothing, he will be a prisoner of a ready writer, he will follow precedent.

Many of us have found themselves, discovering their best selves in prison, and they have enriched the world with the creation of the spirit, reared and chastened and fertilized by these unfavorable, yet favorable conditions.

That is as good as a long textbook on clear English.

CHILDREN HAPPIEST IN "MAKE BELIEVE"

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

ONE of the available things children have in their ability to follow the light of imagination.

Little Vera and Josephine are playing below my window, and I hear their chatter vaguely, as I sit with my book and half dream in the light of the closing day.

"I shall wear emeralds," says Vera, "and if my gown gets home from the dressmaker's shop in time, I shall wear it. What and silver. It is—I am sure the emeralds Clarence gave me will go well with it."

"Surely," agrees Josephine—her soft voice with no note of envy in it. For she has a state towards Vera, who keeps her in the jeweled box of her imagination.

"I shall wear my gown—after all they are my favorites."

"I like colors best, you know," declared her cousin, and so the talk ran on.

Suddenly I hear a new note.

"I may give up going to the ball," says Vera. "I may not feel that I can wear emeralds. I shall wait and see."

Row on Imaginary River

There is a tender note as she speaks of her sister—doubtless the best of friends of Josephine when she protests against the sacrifices announced as probably by her little playmate.

She wishes she had thought of the dolls sooner. She had one of her own—a darling—and she would have taken care of it. But now they are off, the youngsters in a row of four, floating down the river, and both can paddle, so they say.

What a free they will have on the dreamy river, and how are they of their friends when they are off on the trip! I find the contemplation of their dreamy paddling more peaceful than if they were really in one of the fairytale boats where contentment is so graceful and where danger is so great.

It lies around us like a cloud—the innocent grace and joy of childhood. And I wonder if there are the journeys of playtime never come to live in the world of adults. Is the kind of mind which lets all the treasures go and never tries to recover them?

The house we built, my sister and I, in the bounding river shows the stream in the wood-shed. I see another such dwelling place, so far from all the prosaic facts of life and so near to the glittering world of fancy?

Are they dreaming—these precious joys of imagination? So are all the best moments of life. But often we growwise take the wrong role, and then we cannot change it so very easily. History is full of men who the great world worked to change entirely out of their line at the moment of crisis.

Frederick the Great—his failure to entrance the world of his writers or his music. Napoleon French King, too, was happy only in his king where he loved to make furniture, and his music. A lawyer who has a place where he works at home—where he can be alone.

Things Come Right Always

These are examples where happiness was sought in contrast to duty. And no doubt there was joy in the world last year if it failed, when finished, to command the admiration of the world.

What shall we say of the people who have gone completely wrong—chosen a profession or business for which they are not fitted? The farmer who ought to be a lawyer—if anyone ought to be that profession—the shoemaker who belongs in the ranks of soldiers—the cook who ought to be Lady Bountiful, helping all the unemployed in the world to find the kind who should be the butler?

Ah, the round peg in the square hole and the square peg in the round hole! Nothing of the least of real things need spoil the play of the children. They are not to be out-right, and they leave the spirit of happiness over them as long as they live.

"Well, good night, dear, I will see you at the ball," says Vera, as she climbs the fence and runs home at her mother's call.

"Good night, Vera," says Josephine, and her voice is charged with love and contentment.

He Found Out

The Chinaman could speak but little English and the Englishman could speak no Chinese, nevertheless the dinner went off agreeably.

There was one dish that was new to the Englishman. It was a rich stew of onions, pork, mushrooms and a dark, tender, well flavored meat that tasted like duck.

The Englishman ate heartily of this stew. Then he closed his eyes. He had heard that the Chinese had a head with an air of mystery.

After his compliments to the chef, he said: "I am very glad to see you. I like your cooking."

"Quack, quack!"

"No," said the Chinaman, "Bow-wow."
